1. Question: Does KDE offer a Security review to check a districts security policies?

Answer: KDE does not have a formal security policy review service. Because of the magnitude of documents this represents and the differences in approach taken with technology and processes between districts, reviewing security policies is best left to district staff and/or a district's auditors. This will make sure they are appropriate to their environment. KDE has provided guidance for data breach notification, AUPs and other topics on its website.
